THE HADES MOUNTAINS

Stanley gets his harriet and lances the leopard, and rescues Soolah. Garbo finds her elephant missing - hurries on in pursuit.

They become lost and hungry - Garbo overtakes them and makes them prisoners. They reach a friendly native village. Soolah is placed in an animal cage in the chieftain's hut where Garbo sleeps. Stanley and Michael are threatened with death by Garbo who is angry because they have thwarted his plans.

They are chained and locked to two big stakes in the center of the village.

A native girl with a pet monkey falls in love with Michael and agrees to help them escape. She steals the keys to the white man's chains and also the key to the cage from her father. He discovers it - whips her and locks her up.

She then sends the monkey in at night. It steals the keys and she releases Soolah. In the morning, just as they escape, several tigers appear in the village and frighten the natives. Soolah is caught by Garbo and the tigers advance on the chained men. Garbo holds her in his arms to watch the two men torn to pieces by the tigers.
